Miracle phone call from beyond the grave!

COP'S GHOST TEACHES MOM CPR — AND SAVES CHILD'S LIFE!

LONG-DEAD police dispatcher Marie Voisart gave desperate mother Catherine Clement CPR instructions over phone.

By SANDRA LEE / Correspondent

Authorities say the ghost of a dead police dispatcher told a frantic mother how to administer CPR and save the life of her dying child!

"I know it sounds like something out of a movie but it happened, it really and truly happened," Police Capt. Robert Genestar told reporters in Nancy, France.

"The young woman who called us for help told us that dispatcher Marie Voisart told her how to revive her dying baby.

"She could not have known it, but Marie Voisart was killed in an auto accident on Aug. 14, 1992."

The strange drama unfolded when Catherine Clement, 28, found her 7-year-old daughter, Laura, facedown and motionless on the bottom of a backyard pool.

She got the little girl out of the water — then realized she didn't have the emergency skills to revive her.

LITTLE Laura Clement, left, would be dead if her mom Catherine hadn't received emergency help from a dead police dispatcher

"I was hysterical but managed to call the police to ask what I should do," said Mrs. Clement. "The woman on the other end of the line spoke very reassuringly and calmed me enough to listen to her instructions.

"She told me how to drain the water out of Laura's lungs and administer CPR to get her breathing again.

"When I finally did, I was so grateful that I wanted everyone to know what she had done.

"She told me her name was Marie Voisart. And just to make sure I had it right, I wrote the name down. I also jotted down the time. It was 11:20 a.m."

Capt. Genestar confirmed that Mrs. Clement placed an emergency call to police headquarters.

He also noted that the regular dispatcher had walked away from his console, leaving it unmanned, when Mrs. Clement had apparently gotten through.

"Our telephone calls are recorded automatically and this one was no exception," said the cop. "When we play back the tape, all we can hear is Mrs. Clement.

"Judging from what she says, it would appear that she is asking questions of and taking instructions from someone who we can't hear. Mrs. Clement says that someone was Marie Voisart. And she did save the life of her child, so it must be true."

Paranormal researcher Raymond Ream said that the case is one of the most amazing of a few instances of spirits reaching from beyond the grave to assist the living," said the Paris-based expert.

"It seems impossible. But evidence shows that it does happen now and then."

Capt. Genestar said, "Marie loved children. She had handled child emergencies before, and always made sure that our officers attended to them immediately, when she was alive.

HOFFA'S BODY FOUND!

18-year mystery solved!

Missing Teamster boss washes up on Mississippi Riverbank

Police investigators say they have a positive identification on a corpse they found floating in Mississippi River floodwaters: It's Teamster boss Jimmy Hoffa!

By BEATRICE DEXTER
Correspondent

Fingerprints and dental records indicate that it's the dead labor leader, but authorities will not acknowledge that they have the body or make an official announcement about the find until DNA tests confirm the dead man's identity.

"He was alive and had surfaced recently and was even photographed in January of 1993, meeting with President Clinton," said a source in St. Louis, Mo., where the body is allegedly being kept on ice. "There were rumors that he was attracting a lot of support on the labor scene and that his old enemies were afraid he might try to come back to power.

"We think that whoever tried to wipe Mr. Hoffa out the first time went after him again — and this time they succeeded.

"They strangled him and dumped him in the river apparently thinking the flood would take care of his body."

According to the source, who spoke off the record, the Teamster's body was among three corpses fished out of the river on July 29 at the height of the Mississippi floods. Efforts to identify the corpse were routine and included a check of FBI fingerprint files.

Authorities were shocked when computer analysis confirmed that the fingerprints belonged to James Hoffa, the Teamster leader who had gone into hiding on July 30, 1975, then reportedly reappeared in Argentina in 1992.

"At first we assumed we were dealing with a drowning victim, but once we knew who it was we checked closely for cause of death," the source said.

"We discovered that the deceased had been garroted and that he had died of strangulation and a severed spinal cord.

"We believe that Mr. Hoffa was killed by Mafia rivals or perhaps by Kennedy family sympathizers who think he helped engineer the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and his brother Robert. Whoever did it, they did a professional job. This was no casual mugging."

Authorities have requested a DNA readout on the corpse before deciding conclusively that the dead man is Mr. Hoffa. But that's just a formality, the source said.

"They're sure it's Mr. Hoffa and that he's dead at last," he said. "This time

MELTING

"Melting Woman" Chandra Patel Singh has been transformed by the miracle of modern medicine — into an attractive brunette with a perfectly normal appearance!

By BEATRICE DEXTER

Special report

The 38-year-old Indian woman made headlines a few years ago because of a rare condition that caused her flesh to turn soft and melt off her bones like hot wax off a candle. American doctors heard of her plight and offered to treat her free of charge. After three operations and 10 months on an experimental drug, she's a new woman.

"I can't thank my doctors enough for what they have done to help me," said Chandra, whose skin used to hang grotesquely from her body in hideous bumps and lumps. "All my life people have turned their backs on me and children have run screaming from me in fear. Now at last I'm just one of the crowd."

AMAZING melting woman was first featured in the Oct. 25, 1988 issue of Weekly World News.

American doctors surgery on tragic

Chandra was first featured in the pages of Weekly World News in October of 1988, after news of her bizarre disease made headlines in India. At that time doctors — who admitted they could not explain her condition — predicted she would not live very long.

The first signs of her disease appeared in 1986 and over the years took a terrible toll. The flesh melted and drooped off the left side of her face, her nose looked like a blob of dough and she lost the sight in one eye. Her skin was covered with bumps and two of her fingers were so swollen she could not use them.

Treated like a freak, the poor woman was a virtual recluse until tailor Rabindrath Singh read about Chandra and fell in love with her. The couple married in July of 1992, and two months later Chandra received an invitation from surgeons in California to come to America for treatment. The Singhs have lived in this country since that time.

"Since my last operation, I

HEROIC teen Mary Roach sits at the riverbank near the spot where her pal Joey Ignola lost his life.

By DICK DONOVAN / Staff writer

That was the disgusting comment made by one of the teenage cowards who stood by laughing as 14-year-old Joey Ignola drowned in the St. Lawrence River.

Though Joey, who couldn't swim, was within arm's reach of shore, no one could stop laughing long enough to offer him a hand. No one, that is, except his 13-year-old friend, Mary Roach, who tried to save him — but failed. Joey lived with his mom in Cornwall, Canada, only a couple of blocks from the great St. Lawrence where he loved to fish.

A quiet, gentle boy, he took a lot of cruel teasing from other kids because he was a bit slow and attended a special school. They called him names and dared him to jump into the water, knowing full well that he couldn't swim.

When Mary saw Joey fishing from a wet rock by the shore, she kept close by, worried that he might fall in. And that's exactly what happened.

When she saw Joey slip into the water and sink beneath the surface, the petite youngster didn't hesitate. Putting her own life smack on the line, she dived into the river's ripping current in a desperate effort to save her friend. She managed to find Joey's arm in the dark, swirling water and she clawed at a stone shelf in a fruitless effort to pull him to safety. But Joey slipped away.

Frantically, Mary dove for him again and again, but couldn't find him. Finally, she realized that her friend was gone. Incredibly, a few teenagers standing nearby ignored Mary's screams as she struggled to save her friend. Help could have been the difference between life and death.

"They saw he was drowning and they didn't help me," the gutsy 7th grader said. "I yelled loud, but they just stood there."

The best one teen could muster was the courage to call Tracy Gore, a neighbor, and apologize for standing by while Joey went needlessly to his death.

"I told him that wasn't good enough," Tracy said. "I told him, 'You don't stand there laughing when someone is dying.'"

That's a thought those teens will live with for a long, long time.

TWIN

THEY'RE SO CUTE! Patricia Trillor says people are stunned to find out her sons are identical twins.

They're both doing fine, says proud mom!

By TANYA BRODER
Correspondent

Baby brothers Michael and Matthew Trillor are identical twins, but the pair don't look like it — because at three months one weighs a hefty 26 pounds and the other tips the scale at just over 5!

The little boys' difference in size is the greatest ever recorded in twins delivered at the same time, but both babies are perfectly healthy, doctors say, and even remarkably advanced for their age.

They developed their shocking weight difference because of conditions in the womb.

"The doctors told me Michael was attached to a small, extremely narrow umbilical cord and got very little nourishment in the womb," said the twins' mother, Patricia Trillor, 31. "Most of the nourishment went to Matthew, who grew much faster than his brother.

"When my babies were born 13 weeks ago, Matthew was a little butterball who weighed 15 pounds. Michael weighed less than a pound at birth, but he was well developed and didn't even need an incubator."

The twins' size difference has remained since they were born at their single mom's apartment in Chicago.

Today, Michael — who eats a special high-calorie diet — weighs five times as much as he did at birth, but he's still a teensy mite for his age. On the other hand, Matthew is already an armload for his mother, having nearly doubled his weight since birth.

Patricia, an unemployed waitress, says most folks don't suspect at first that the boys are twins, even though they look exactly alike except for their size.

And whenever people find out the boys are identical twins, they often assume something's wrong with Michael.

"They think he's sick or developmentally retarded or something, but the doctors say he's just fine," said Patricia. "The doctors say Michael will catch up to his brother in a year or so and that from then on the boys will be the same.

"Meanwhile, my boys are alert and active. And they are way ahead of other babies their age. They're already sitting up and starting to crawl."

The twins are celebrities in their neighborhood, where they attract a lot of attention when proud Patricia takes them for walks in their stroller.

"Folks call them 'The Big and Little Twins,' " Patricia says. "They make friends wherever they go."

AMAZING HEN LAYS HAM 'N' EGGS!

CRACK open one of the special eggs and enjoy an entire breakfast!

By RICK TRACY / Correspondent

An Arkansas farmer claims he has revolutionized breakfast for millions of Americans by crossing a chicken with a pig — and produced a ham-and-egg egg.

"When you buy a dozen of my eggs at the local supermarket, you're not just getting eggs. You're getting a complete breakfast," said poultry farmer Felix Boxliter.

BOXLITER

"All of these amazing eggs have little bits of ham in them," he said. "Fixing these for breakfast is a lot less expensive than buying the ham and eggs separately."

Boxliter, 59, has been tinkering with cross-breeding at his 80-acre farm near Batesville for the past 12 years but never had much success.

"I tried a special form of artificial insemination to cross-breed other animals on my farm without success," he said.

"Then I hit upon the most obvious idea, crossing one of my prize oinkers with a chicken. It took me five years, but I've got something very special for America's breakfast table."

The cautious farmer declined to divulge specific details of his special artificial insemination process.

"Basically, I inject sperm-containing semen from one of my best hogs into one of my hens," he explained. "It has taken me two years to perfect the process.

"For some reason I can't explain, the egg yolk contain ham but not bacon," Boxliter said. "But I hope to produce a bacon-and-egg egg within a few months. I believe it's just a matter of time."

Boxliter isn't ready to market his incredible ham-and-egg egg, but is working toward that goal.

"I know I'll have a lot to prove, especially when I deal with the Food and Drug Administration and the powerful pork lobby," he said. "But I know

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S ANCESTORS WERE WEREWOLVES

BIZARRE family secret: The Queen has had some wild and woolly ancestors.

THE ROYAL forefathers looked a lot like this fuzzy fellow.

. . . claims Europe's top historian

The Royal House of Windsor? More like the Royal House of Werewolves, says a top European historian whose dogged research has blown the lid off Buckingham Palace's most closely guarded secret.

"Queen Elizabeth's ancestors were werewolves," says Dieter Manheim, professor of history at the University of Heidelberg, Germany.

"King George V, Elizabeth's grandfather, renounced his German ancestry and proclaimed the House of Windsor on July 17, 1917," says Prof. Manheim.

"The cover story is that the King took an English name because of anti-German sentiment during WW I.

"The real reason was to distance himself and his offspring from a bizarre family secret — werewolves. Lycanthropes, humans who change into werewolves, appear frequently in the Battenberg family tree, the name the King dropped for the name of Windsor. By changing names he hoped to hide his hairy ancestors."

Lightning strike turns Florida beauty into a nymphomaniac!

18,000 VOLTS has transformed Lisa Clemons into a sexual monster.

'My life is hell since I was struck . . . I can't go 15 minutes without thinking about sex!'

A woman who was struck by lightning on a Florida beach miraculously survived the staggering jolt — but the 18,000 volts turned her into a nymphomaniac!

"My life has been a living hell ever since I was hit by that lightning," said Lisa Clemons of Rochester, Minn. "And to tell the truth, my sexual obsession is getting worse every day.

"Some people think this is funny but I tell you, it's no laughing matter," the unmarried teacher said.

"I can't go 15 minutes without being overcome by sexual desires. I've even had to take an extended leave from my job because of it."

The attractive 26-year-old was on vacation and walking on Miami Beach when she was struck by the lightning.

By DAVID NICHOLAS
Correspondent

"I really don't even remember being hit," she said. "My friends told me I was unconscious for about 10 minutes but the first thing I remember was coming to and feeling really frisky. To be honest, I felt really turned on."

But what seemed like harmless friskiness quickly got out of control.

"In the past I'd always had a pretty normal sex life, I guess," Lisa said. "Guys have always told me I was good looking and I never was a prude — but now I've become one of those girls I used to look down on.

"I started dating a bunch of new guys but with all the AIDS and everything going around I'm careful. I don't want to end up with some kind of disease.

Dr. Matt Hobart

"Now I've gotten to the point where I'll pick up seven or eight guy a night at bars and then can't sleep later because I'm so frustrated and all keyed up."

"I knew I was getting out of hand so I decided to go to a doctor about it."

Experts treating Lisa say they have never heard of a case like this.

"Since it's extremely rare for anyone to survive such a powerful lightning strike, there is very little research into this matter," Dr. Matt Hobart said.

"It's obvious to me the jolt that has caused her obsession," Dr. Hobart said. "We are doing everything we can but haven't found a way to treat her."

Lisa said she decided to make her problem public and give an interview to Weekly World News because she hopes its readers can give her some help.

"I hope there's someone out there who has some idea that can help me get my life straightened out. Nothing against the doctors but they haven't been able to do anything for me.

"I promise I'll read all the letters I get. Maybe doing that will take my mind off sex for a few

When his dad dropped dead in the rugged Canadian wilds, 11-year-old Pat Gaumont had to grow up fast. And because he was man enough to meet the challenge, he and his kid brother are alive today!

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

Pat and his 6-year-old brother Marc were left stranded when their 52-year-old father Ron dropped dead of a heart attack in the Quebec wilderness north of the Ottawa River from Mattawa.

The quick-thinking boy worked feverishly trying to revive his dad with a CPR procedure he'd seen on TV. But after several minutes, he knew his father was beyond help.

The boys' father had been setting up their camp when the fatal attack struck like a bolt out of the blue. The tent was up, but the air mattresses had to be inflated.

There was a pump that worked off the cigarette lighter in the truck, but the lighter wouldn't work. Pat switched fuses and got the lighter and the pump to work. The boys slept and before dawn they were huddled in the truck.

Pat started the engine, but the heater wouldn't work. After more fuse switching, it finally started blowing hot air.

When it got light enough to see, Pat packed fruit and canned drinks into a bag. He took his brother's hand and started hiking. He had wanted to drive the truck, but his dad's boat and trailer were attached and the two boys together couldn't lift them off the hitch.

A few hours later, Pat and Marc came to a private fishing lodge. People there drove them to a telephone where police were called. A couple of days later, they were back with their mother in Gatineau.

"It was a rough ordeal for a lad, but he came through it with flying colors," Police Constable Claude Dion said.

"When he went into the wilderness, he was a boy. When he walked out, he was a man.

"If Pat had not kept his wits about him, both he and his brother could have died out there. Instead, they both have exciting tales for their kids."

TURN BIG MONEY

. . . INTO LITTLE MONEY!

I'm madder than a congressman who didn't get a pay raise over the way our bumbling politicians are handling the economic crisis in America.

I've come up with several brilliant ideas in past columns that would turn the economy around pronto.

But this time, I think I've hit a home run, by gum.

My latest economic theory just may be my greatest. It's so simple, it frightens me.

Small money. You heard me right, folks — small money.

Let's let every American trade in each of his regular-size bills or regular-size coins for two smaller ones. In other words, you turn in a regular-size $5 bill and you get two smaller $5 bills in return.

Double your money, two for one — get it?

We could set up government banks across the country where people could trade in big money for small money. Every American could double their net worth overnight. And with twice the money to spend, consumers would fuel the biggest economic rebound in American history!

And the boom wouldn't even slow down until all the big money was traded in. That could take years, my friends.

I know, I know. My plan's a little tough to figure out if you're not up on economic theory. But believe me, this would change is that we'd all be richer and we could downsize our wallets.

Hey, dimes and nickels would be a little harder to see, but what the hell. Who would need small change anyway once you doubled your money?

Japanese risking their lives for a paycheck!

WHAT A WAY TO MAKE A LIVING: Unemployed Japanese execs make $500 every time they put their lives on the line as test dummies.

By SCOTTY PAUL
Correspondent

Out-of-work business execs are so desperate for money they are risking their lives — as test dummies for Japanese auto makers.

At least 300 of them have suffered broken ribs, ruptured spleens, punctured lungs and skull fractures crashing cars at 50 m.p.h. in the name of "auto safety."

"It's a source of income for men who have been laid off and it's cheaper than designing and testing expensive mannequins," said Yoshihiko Takayasu, a senior auto research technician from Osaka.

Auto dummies used for crash testing are designed to be as lifelike as possible and can cost up to $7,000 each, he explained.

The dummy's chest has five spring-steel ribs with attached material that represents the rib cage and abdomen, as well as other built-in technology to record effects of the impact.

"We design our dummies to be as much like a human being as possible," Takayasu explained. "But what could be more lifelike than a real person?"

Japanese auto research executives say the human test dummies are saving them hundreds of thousands of dollars a year compared to the cost of mannequins.

"And we're helping solve the country's unemployment problem," Takayasu added.

The human test dummies are paid the equivalent of $500 for a few seconds behind the steering wheel, crashing cars head-on, broadside, and for rear end collisions. They must sign an agreement absolving the auto and suffered more whiplash injuries than I can count," said human guinea pig Katsu Samojima. "But my family has to eat and the mortgage has to be paid. I make $1,500 in an average week."

Former aircraft plant executive Etsuo Koyama, 43, spent almost a year looking for work after he was laid off.

"Everywhere I applied for a job, they turned me down because I was over-qualified," he remarked.

"It's tough being a dummy when you're used to being a bigshot. But I'm not complaining."

Chimp makes monkeys out of stockbrokers!

A Swedish newspaper gave five stock specialists and a chimpanzee $1,250 each to invest in the stock market — and the chimp made off with the most loot!

While Stockholm stock experts spent hours carefully deciding which investments to make, the clever chimp all the companies in the market.

'MY BABY!'

RIPPED OFF: Mike Vertucci's cherished truck was stolen from his N.Y.C. auto junkyard in 1983.

SHOCKED: Mike's "baby" was returned to his Riviera Beach, Fla., auto business driveway in 1993.

Man finds truck in driveway — 10 years after it was stolen!

RIVIERA BEACH, Fla. — You could have knocked Mike Vertucci over with a feather when his cherished Ford flatbed truck pulled into the driveway of his auto parts business — 10 years after it had been stolen in New York City!

"I couldn't believe my eyes when I saw that truck after all those years," the 62-year-old father of four said, "It was absolutely amazing.

"I said, 'Nah, this can't be.' I had looked for it for 10 years. Every time I'd see a truck like it go by, it would stop me cold. Then out of the blue, there it is, parked in my driveway."

The shiny red Ford F-600 V-8 was stolen from Mike's New York auto parts yard in 1983. Sadly, it wasn't insured.

"I had just polished it that Saturday afternoon, and it was stolen that night," he recalled.

By ROSE GRADY
Correspondent

"I used to keep it immaculate. Believe it or not, it's in great shape now."

Mike says that when he saw the truck in his Pick-a-Part driveway, he knew immediately that it was his.

It had the same custom, side-mounted gas tank, the same "Mickey Mouse" air conditioner he installed in '83, and it had the same tie-down rails he'd welded to the undercarriage.

"There was no doubt in my mind it was my truck," Mike said.

He called local cops who turned the case over to the Florida Highway Patrol because the truck's vehicle identification number had been altered.

Cops said the towing company operator who was driving the truck had bought it in Fort Lauderdale. "He was an innocent victim," Mike said.

However, Mike's ownership was proven when another number found on the chassis matched the number he had in his old records.

Seeing the truck's amazing return after 10 years as a sign that his luck has changed, Mike said he is using the truck's serial numbers to play the Florida Lottery.

Most frat members are drunken slobs!

Fraternity and sorority members drink more than other college kids and suffer more health and academic problems as well, according to a shocking new survey.

In a poll of nearly 54,000 college students, fraternity men reported downing an average of 20 drinks a week, while other college men averaged just eight.

Among females, sorority members drank six drinks a week, compared to non-sorority's three.

RULES OF LOVE!

By BARBARA TORCELLI
Correspondent

You can handle the falling in love by following some commonsense rules that will strengthen your relationship and allow it to flourish, reveals a noted authority.

"One of the most difficult problems facing people of every age is how to handle the emotions of love," said Dr. Panos D. Bardis.

"Inside and outside of marriage, love develops, grows and changes — and each couple must mature along with it. Love is like a jet plane. It must be kept on a steady, unswerving course or it may soar to the heavens — only to crash to earth."

To help you deal with the emotions of love, Dr. Bardis, author of History of Family, provided these tips:

● If you are beginning a relationship, don't throw yourself completely into it until you are certain you and your partner really have enough in common to sustain it.

"Opposites attract, but the novelty of it will soon wear off," said Dr. Bardis. "You must have ideals, attitudes and convictions in common."

● If a misunderstanding that threatens the relationship arises, talk openly and honestly about it with your partner. Communication can help cement even a crumbling relationship.

"Confront problems as soon as they arise.

"Don't let the problem snowball into an avalanche," said Dr. Bardis.

● When you're upset, don't let your emotions get the best of you so that you put the blame on your partner or become too critical of that person. Otherwise you risk demolishing your partner's ego and destroying the relationship.

● If you are confronted with unrequited love, don't suffer alone, says Dr. Bardis. "Maintain contact with friends who will supply psychological support."

Don't hesitate to seek professional advice. "Try to look at unrequited love in a positive way," said Dr. Bardis. "The fact that the love was one-sided can be interpreted to mean there were no real grounds for a relationship. Always remember love and its emotions do not take care of themselves," added Dr. Bardis.

LIFE-STUDY FELLOWSHIP

Looking for laughs!

Lovely Alison Child is looking for a guy who is both a joker and a gentleman. "I go for men who act silly and make me laugh," the European supermodel says. "I also like my men to open doors and treat me like a very special lady."

I met a wonderful man — but he eats like a pig!

Confidential

Dear Worried in Raleigh: You're getting all worked up over nothing — but I like it!

Dear Suspicious in Dallas: I'm no doctor, but it sounds terminal to me.

Dear Forgiving in Columbus: I can't tell you what to do but I will say this: I wouldn't forgive a man who cheated on me if my life depended on it!

Dear Baffled in Stanfield: The answer to your problem is as plain as the nose on my face: Go find a broomstick — and sit on it!

Dear Desperate in Nashville: I'd like to help but to be perfectly frank, I never had zits!

Dear Hospitalized in Roanoke: The next time your boyfriend wants to have sex in the garage, tell him to leave the degreaser out of it!

Dear Visionary in Morganton: If I lived in a rubber room for 22 years, I'd see visions, too!

Dear Dotti: I met a wonderful man a few months ago and it looks like we're going to get married around Christmas. This guy is highly educated, well traveled and a gentleman in every way.

The only problem is that he has awful table manners. He smacks and drools and hunches over his plate like a hog at the trough. I'm taking him home to meet my parents soon. How can I make him eat right? — Disgusted in New York

Dear Disgusted: When you and your man visit your parents, serve up a fancy dinner in their dining room — and dump his grub in a doggie dish. If he doesn't get the message and clean up his act, I'll eat my hat!

Why do store clerks have to be so damn nasty?

Dear Dotti: I was in a department store the other day and asked the clerk if she carried a particular line of shirts. She said: "I think so." So I said: "You think so? Can you find out?" She didn't like that one bit and told me to look for them myself. What's wrong with people these days, Dotti? Don't they know that customers keep them in business? — Furious in Macon

Dear Furious: When I go head-to-head with a no-nothing clerk I always come out on top. First, I ask to see the manager of the store. Then I tell him to ax the idiot or I'll never come back!

My wacky wife wants me to shave my whole body!

Dear Dotti: My wife of five years has suddenly decided that she doesn't like my body hair and has told me to start shaving or else. I'm not talking about a beard, Dotti. My wife wants me to shave my face, legs, underarms, chest — everything! This is crazy. So how do I get her to change her mind and get off my back? — Worried in Atlanta

Dear Worried: Your wife is going through a phase and I'm sure it will pass. In the meantime, be flexible — and do what the little lady says!

Where can I meet a man who isn't a flake or a fruit?

Dear Dotti: No matter how hard I try, I can't find a decent man. All the guys I work with are too busy making money to know how to treat a gal right. And the rest of the men I meet in bars are so effeminate that I wouldn't date them if they asked. I'm 31 years old. Help! — Lonely in Dallas

Dear Lonely: If you don't know how to attract men at this late date, there's nothing I can say to help. With that in mind, I'd get used to living alone. Time has passed you by, lady, and the sooner you realize it, the better!

Pal offered me $5,000 if I let him bed my wife!

Dear Dotti: A friend has offered me $5,000 if I let him sleep with my wife. I'm not real keen on the idea, but I could use the cash. How should I approach my wife? — Unsure in Kinston

Dear Unsure: I get a lot of brazen letters but this one takes the cake. If you want $5,000 from this buddy of yours, sleep with him yourself!

Dotti will answer your letters — and tell it like it is. Just write to her, c/o Weekly World News, 600 South East Coast Ave., Lantana, Fla. 33462.

Ask Serena

Why is my guardian angel trying to kill me?

Dear Serena: All my life I have consulted with a guardian angel who used to have my best interests at heart. By closing my eyes and calling her into my mind, she would advise me on all sorts of things, like career, money and romance.

I don't really know why, but a few weeks ago everything changed when my guardian angel started telling me to commit suicide. Why is she trying to kill me, Serena? Is this some kind of a bad joke? — Afraid in Greensboro

Dear Afraid: Your guardian angel isn't trying to kill you — but an evil demon is. Fortunately, this entity isn't strong enough to resist my spell of protection. From this day on, the only entity you will hear from is your continue to give you the good advice you deserve!

Dear Serena: My beloved mother died a few weeks ago and I can't find her jewelry anywhere. It's not worth all that much. But it does have a great deal of sentimental value and I can't help but think that it's been stolen. Please your crystal ball and tell me the truth, Serena. Will I ever get Sir Paul back? — Horrified in Fort Worth

Dear Horrified: As you suspect, your cat was definitely stolen. On a high note, he will escape from the woman who took him and return home on December 21!

Dear Puzzled: Your mother hid her jewelry for safekeeping a few days before she died. You'll find it in a red and blue cookie tin in her hall closet — beside a hat box marked "Carnes."

CAVEMEN FEASTED ON BARBECUED DINOSAUR!

By R. NEALE LIND
Correspondent

Ancient drawings on a cave wall contain recipes for cooking dinosaur meat — and they prove beyond a doubt that man walked the Earth millions of years before scientists once believed he did!

The recipes, found last month in a cave about 30 miles east of Saka, Kenya, clearly call for dinosaur meat. But according to experts in the field, dinosaurs disappeared from the Earth more than 60 million years before human beings evolved on this planet.

"This is the most astounding paleontological discovery of the century," says Dr. Werner Jurgens, world-renowned paleontologist from Hamburg, Germany.

"It means everything we thought we knew about how and when primitive man first came into existence is false."

The crude drawings show a velociraptor, a prehistoric reptile known to have died out at the close of the Cretaceous Period, being cut up and roasted over a fire.

"This changes everything. It means that, 60 million years ago, an intelligent humanoid creature was not only alive, he was using fire, tools, and language," Jurgens.

Although the art is ba simple, the recipes seem sophisticated.

"Several of these pictur plants and herbs being rub sprinkled onto the meat," Jurgens. "That would indic early man had a highly de sense of taste because he ing seasonings."

Not everyone in the s community is impressed w new discovery. Dr. Jorge D noted Spanish archaeolo reluctant to believe the d are genuine.

"This has to be a hoax Dr. Delgado. "I suspect tha one is having a great laug scientific community right

But Dr. Jurgens stands validity of the find.

...department of Lyon University in France."

The experts ran dozens of tests on the drawings, checking the cave walls for rate of erosion, moisture and condensation levels, and even analyzing the residue that collected on the cave floor under the pictures. Their findings are absolutely conclusive: The paintings are millions of years old.

Dr. Jurgens says the recipes may be just the beginning of a whole series of discoveries that will be made by searching other caves in the area.

"If these early humans were cooking and using picture writing, who knows what inventions and other important evidence we may find in those caves," says Dr. Jurgens.

"It's conceivable that an entire lost civilization could come to light that would teach us volumes about the development of early man."

Recipe from the dawn of time!

Language experts from Lyon University in France worked out a rough translation of one of the recipes as it appears on the cave wall:

ROAST DINOSAUR

PREPARATION:

Step 1: Cut dinosaur's head, legs and tail off.

Step 2: Make several tears in the skin but do not remove it from the flesh.

Step 3: Drain out the blood.

Step 4: Rub the meat with sage or thyme.

(NOTE: Experts aren't sure which plants the recipe refers to but the drawings resemble today's culinary herbs, sage and thyme.)

Step 5: Roast the meat over the fire until it turns black.

Step 6: Take it off and eat it.

BE AS THIN AS YOU WANT DIET!

You can be as thin as you want, says a big city doctor — just by following his simple eating program.

By BRIAN REIDY
Correspondent

"This is the only diet I advocate," declared Dr. Robert Levine, a specialist in treating overweight people, who says he's used his diet on at least 10,000 patients in the last five years.

"You can use the strictest form of the diet to get rid of five or 10 stubborn pounds, or you can use it for gradual weight loss. You will never put the weight back on if you follow the diet properly."

Dr. Levine's program involves three steps:

1. Eat only three times a day — and never between meals.

2. Avoid the forbidden five: Beef, pork, lamb, salt and alcohol.

3. Avoid such foods as cookies, cake and salad dressing until you've achieved your desired weight. Then you can enjoy them sparingly.

"Nobody ever has to eat beef, and that goes for lamb and pork too," said Dr. Levine.

"By substituting chicken, veal and fish for these meats, you're taking in 25 percent fewer calories. Give up salt, except for the salt found in food, because it retains water — and water can be translated into pounds."

And stay away from booze. If you must drink stick to small amounts of white wine or straight liquor without calorie-laden mixers.

"This is a nutritional eating plan, and just makes plain good sense," said Dr. Levine.

A key part of the plan is reducing your portion sizes. Dr. Levine emphasized that each person must do this differently.

"The only way to become really thin is to eat like a thin person, but I don't try to turn a 200-pound patient into someone who eats like a 120-pound person overnight," he explained.

"For instance, if a patient's intake of fish is 12 ounces a day, I initially reduce it to 8 ounces if weight loss can be achieved for a while. Then it's reduced to 4 to 6 ounces a day."

Dr. Frank Sangiorgio, a family practitioner, described Dr. Levine's plan as "beautiful."

MAN KILLS HIS BROTHER & SISTER — BY GIVING THEM CANCER!

Chemist laced their coffee with powerful carcinogen — so he could inherit the family fortune!

By RICK TRACY / Correspondent

In one of the most cold-blooded and bizarre murder schemes ever hatched, greedy Hans Krueger killed his own brother and sister — with a cancer-causing drug.

"They suffered months and months of unbearable pain as the cancer quickly ravaged their bodies," said Police Inspector Wolf Schneider. "Toward the end, they welcomed death."

Money-grubbing Hans, 27, devised his evil plan six years ago so he could gain control of the family's lucrative trucking business he had inherited with his brother, Karl, 24, and sister, Greta, 21.

Heartless Hans, a chemistry whiz in college, broke into the laboratory of a cancer institute in Stuttgart, Germany, and stole a methylating agent called dimethyl nitrosamine, a water-soluble chemical used to fight cancer or induce it.

"The break-in was reported but doctors at the lab didn't discover the chemical was missing until several months later," said Inspector Schneider.

By that time, it was too late to save doomed Greta and Karl, who had become bedridden from drinking coffee laced with the deadly cancerous drug day after day.

Within days after taking the powerful liquid killer, unsuspecting Greta and Karl vomited blood and became violently ill. Both were hospitalized.

"We thought at first they had become infected with some infectious disease," said an epidemiologist. "But further tests revealed they had inoperable cancer.

"We never expected they were being murdered. Neither had seen the need to be examined by a doctor for years.

"And there was a history of cancer in the family. Their mother and maternal grandfather had died of cancer."

After months of horrifying agony, Karl died almost a year to the day after unknowingly drinking the first cupful of poisoned coffee. Greta passed away three months later. Their murderous brother had both bodies cremated.

Hateful Hans became enormously wealthy as his trucking business prospered over the next five years. He was sitting on top of the world, recognized as one of the richest bachelors in Europe.

HAPPIER TIMES: Hans Krueger, standing, with his sister, Greta, and brother, Karl.

And then it happened. During a doctors diagnosed Hans as having incurable cancer of the liver.

But before the end came, Hans summoned police to his bedside and confessed to the hideously cruel murders of his own brother and sister.

"He committed the perfect crime, but I guess he didn't want to meet his maker with that on his conscience," said Inspector Schneider.

Schoolkids winning prizes for torturing animals!

By LISA MERAKIS / Correspondent

Thousands of innocent animals are being tortured to death for science, an animal rights activist charges — by schoolkids vying for top marks on their high school science projects!

The ambitious students are burning mice alive, plunging electrodes into the skulls of parakeets and cutting off the paws of puppies in the quest for good grades, scholarships or cash awards from big companies in Japan, according to Kiko Kawabata, head of Save Our Animals.

"One little girl actually minced up hamsters in a meat grinder so she could study how they responded to pain," said Miss Kawabata, 57, in Tokyo. "And she's not unusual — there are hundreds of thousands of other students in Japan who are running at-home torture camps in the name of science."

Miss Kawabata says students in her country are under enormous pressure to get into top universities and they will do anything to call attention to themselves scholastically. So when high school science projects are assigned, the kids go overboard and wind up tormenting helpless birds, fish and mammals in projects worthy of Nazi concentration camps.

"One boy used searing hot infrared lamps to burn rabbits and then clocked how long it took the animals to die," Miss Kawabata said.

"Another boy gouged the eyes out of snakes to see if they could hunt while blind. They couldn't, so they starved to death.

"I saw an experiment two years ago in which a girl actually cut the paws off a litter of puppies to see if the mother dog would treat them differently than normal puppies.

"She learned that dogs make no special arrangements for the 'handicapped' — but her poor little subjects had to be gassed afterwards because they were horribly crippled."

Miss Kawabata says last year 244,751 high school science projects involved cruelty to animals and resulted in the deaths of hundreds of thousands of helpless creatures.

She has started a campaign in the Japanese parliament to outlaw any school science experiments using live animals as subjects.

Wife divorces hubby who wouldn't stop smoking!

Fed-up Francine DeLino loves her trucker hubby with all her heart, but she's giving the bozo the boot — because he refuses to give up his precious cigarettes!

"We've been married for 12 years and I'm still crazy about the guy," the shaken lady told reporters. "But his damn smoking drives me up the wall.

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

FED-UP Francine DeLino sent her hubby Dustin packing because he wouldn't stop smoking.

"For years I begged him to quit until I was blue in the face, and finally last month I told him flat out it was either the cigarettes or me. He told me to settle down and then he reached into his pocket and lit up another one — so I sent him packing, by God.

"I'm really going to miss him because he's a sweet guy in a lot of ways. Trouble is, he loves his tar and nicotine more than he loves me."

Flustered Francine, 31, and her husband Dustin, 38, have been waging the battle of the butts since the day they tied the knot in a Chicago suburb back in 1981.

"Dustin has smoked ever since I first met him and I've always hated it," recalled the miffed mother of two.

"But he only smoked a pack a day back then and I figured I could sweet-talk him into giving them up once we were married.

"But the more I nagged him to quit, the more he smoked. And by the time he quit long-haul trucking and started coming home every night, he was up to three packs a day.

"His clothes, his breath, his whole body smelled like a dirty ashtray. After awhile, I found I'd almost gotten used to it."

But earlier this year, frustrated Francine read about the dangers of breathing other folks' smoke and told her hard-puffing hubby to put 'em out or pack up and leave.

"We've got two kids living at home and I don't want their health ruined just because their dad's a nicotine fiend," she said. "And I sure don't want him and his cigarettes wrecking my health either.

"But when I gave him an ultimatum, he kept on smoking like a chimney — so I had no choice but to toss him out on his ear."

Now ciggie-lovin' Dustin is holed up in a tiny, two-room Chicago apartment, waiting for his heartsick missus to serve him with divorce papers.

"Really, we never had any big fight or anything," he said with a sigh.

"She just told me to choose between her and my cigarettes — and I chose my cigarettes."

CIGARETTE-LOVING hubby Dustin would rather take another puff than make peace with his wife.

'She said: It's the butts or me... I chose the butts'

Expert says . . . THE KIND OF RING YOU WEAR REVEALS THE REAL YOU!

The kind of ring you wear, and the finger you wear it on, reveals a lot about your personality, says a New York psychologist.

By DONNA PAINE
Correspondent

Dr. Herbert Hoffman said that a ring "serves as a constant reminder of your sense of values, taste, financial status or group affiliations."

Here's his analysis:

WEDDING BAND — If you're a woman and you wear a simple, unadorned wedding ring, you believe in your "till death do us part" vows. If your wedding band is ornate, distinctively designed or jeweled, you are proud of both your marital status and your mate.

"If you're a man and wear any type of wedding band, you are secure with your own sense of masculinity. You can speak softly and make your wishes known. You're willing to compromise to keep the peace," Dr. Hoffman said.

FRIENDSHIP RING — It lets people know there is someone who considers you a valuable individual. "You are unusually selective in your choice of friends, for you hold very high values."

CLUB OR CLASS RING — "You tend to join groups and organizations, you are an activist who prefers to get deeply involved when you believe in something."

BIRTHSTONE RING — "You're always on the lookout for new friendships. You can walk into a roomful of strangers and within minutes become deeply engrossed with several people," Dr. Hoffman said.

COCKTAIL RING — "This is an exclusively female piece of jewelry, but there is a male equivalent — the flashy diamond. If you wear such a ring, you're justifiably proud of your achievements."

HANDCRAFTED RING — You have a highly artistic nature. You're a trendsetter in your social set.

Where you wear your ring is also very revealing.

"If you wear a pinky ring, you have a flair for the dramatic — you like to do things in a big way," Dr. Hoffman said. "If you wear a ring on the index finger of either hand, you have a forceful nature.

"If you wear a ring on the third finger of the right hand, you are well-balanced.

Soccer field attacked!

SPACE ALIENS KIDNAP 400 — AND STEAL THEIR BRAINS!

By TONY CASSIDY
Special correspondent

Hundreds of people watching a soccer game in Brazil were transformed into human robots when they were kidnapped by mind-snatching space aliens from an enormous UFO!

On the afternoon of September 13 more than 400 men, women and children spent almost two hours aboard the shimmering, saucer-shaped starship as it hovered silently over the stadium in Campos.

When they were finally beamed back to Earth, the victims looked and moved more like zombies than living, breathing humans.

Their eyes were clouded and unblinking and the only sounds they could make were pitiful moans.

But one of those beamed aboard — an 18-year-old girl named Maria — was returned unharmed and unaltered to deliver a message some see as hope where others see a treacherous lie:

"I was told to tell everyone that they will be back to return the minds they have taken," Maria said. "I asked when that would be. All I was told was, 'soon.' "

Maria said she has no idea why she was selected by the alien mind-snatchers to be their messenger. And if their message was designed to calm the villagers, it failed miserably.

"The thought that they will be back has left the village paralyzed with fear," said Dr. Arturo Zenobio, a local physician who's directing efforts to care for the victims.

"But we have to put our fears aside. For now, we must worry about those who need our help. They are little more than the living dead. They are totally harmless and pose no threat to anyone. But they are unable to care for themselves. We have to bathe, clothe and feed them. Mentally, they are like newborn infants . . . totally helpless."

Tests conducted by Brazil's leading experts failed to reveal how the victims were robbed of their minds. Their best guess is that some highly advanced electronic scanner tapped into each brain and drained its data storage bank.

"It was like siphoning gas," Dr. Zenobio explained.

"At this stage of the game, the only thing we can do is try to make the victims as comfortable as possible — until the aliens return or the victims die."

She's 28 years old ...and a Grandma!

PROUD grandma Concetta Costa, right, holds her granddaughter Rosa, whose birth made Concetta Italy's youngest grandma at 28. New mom Ida, 14, rests at left.

By BEATRICE DEXTER / Correspondent

Pretty Concetta Costa is only 28 years old — but she's already a grandma!

Her daughter Ida presented the young woman with a beautiful baby granddaughter a few weeks ago, making her the youngest woman in Italy ever to become a grandparent.

"My little girl of 14 years has become a mama," brunette, brown-eyed Concetta said proudly in Messina, Sicily.

"It makes me remember 14 years ago when I gave birth to Ida in the same hospital.

"My daughter is like me. As I did when I was young, she ran away with her boyfriend and also as I did, she got pregnant before she married. After she had her baby she married, just as I did. I feel like a mother or a big sister, but I'm really a grandmother at 28. It's great."

The mother of three daughters age 10, 13, and 14, Concetta married early to escape an unhappy home life.

She and her husband Giuseppe ran away together and married after Ida was born. Over the years they told the story of their elopement to their daughters — and Ida listened to the romantic tale with starry eyes.

Last year young Ida fell in love for the first time with a young neighbor, Orazio Bucalo, 17. A few months later, the Costa family made plans to move to the other side of town. The young love birds — afraid they would be separated forever — ran away together. Three months later, Ida contacted her worried mother and told her she was pregnant.

"I had cried night after night and prayed for my daughter's return," Concetta said. "When she called, I realized that I had forgiven her. She was my daughter and she needed me. After that we were always together.

"This is just like 14 years ago, only now I am taking care of Ida and taking care of her little daughter, too. I feel lucky, and very happy, with my new little family," said Concetta.

Mom and daughter had bouncing babies at 14!

Gun-toting Andy Hansard was famished, but his local pizza parlor was packed with patrons. So trigger-happy Andy, 37, fired six shots into the ceiling to clear the place out — then sat down and pigged out on pizza and beer!

"I was just so hungry I couldn't wait for all those people to eat up and leave on their own, so I gave them a good reason to leave," the smart-aleck mechanic explained later. "Then I sat down and ate their leftovers in peace and quiet."

Motel maid gets $2 tip for returning $170,000 necklace!

LOS ANGELES — Struggling mother of two Julia Sommers spent her own time and money finding the rich owner of a $170,000 necklace she found in a parking lot — and the cheapskate rewarded her honesty with a measly $2 tip.

"I didn't expect a big reward for doing the right thing, but I did expect to at least break even," said Julia, 27, who holds down two jobs to make ends meet.

"I spent $35 in newspaper ads and about three hours of my time trying to find the owner of that beautiful diamond and emerald necklace."

"I DIDN'T expect a big reward for doing the right thing, but I did hope to at least break even," says Julia Sommers, who spent her own money on newspaper ads to find the owner.

The single mother of two little girls, who works 14 hours a day as a waitress and motel maid, found the expensive necklace in a shopping mall parking lot.

"I never thought about keeping it, even after a jeweler told me how much it was worth. I teach my daughters to be honest and I'm no hypocrite."

The wealthy owner read the ad and called Julia, describing the necklace. She apparently lost it in a Los Angeles mall parking lot only a few minutes before Julia found it.

"We decided to meet outside the same mall. She was a well dressed woman in her early 40s.

"The necklace was a birthday gift from her husband and she was ecstatic to get it back," Julia said.

After a few minutes of small talk, the grateful woman — a banker's wife — reached in her purse.

"Your honesty should not go unrewarded," she told Julia.

Then she pulled out a roll of bills and handed Julia $2.

"I felt like giving it back to her, figuring the old tightwad needed it a lot more than I did," Julia told Weekly World News.

"But I thanked her and kept the money.

"She got into her Rolls Royce and drove away."

THE MISCHIEVOUS ghost doesn't need the key to Barry's 1960 Bel Air when he goes joyriding.

'My '60 Chevy is haunted & it's driving me insane!'

Poltergeist takes prized $73,000 car for joyrides!

By SCOTTY PAUL / Correspondent

Car buff Barry Wingert has been arrested, punched out and swamped with parking tickets ever since he paid $73,000 for a mint '60 Chevrolet Bel Air — and discovered it was haunted.

"I don't even try to drive the danged thing anymore. It's too dangerous," said baffled Barry. "My car is being driven from beyond the grave.

"I park it, lock it and put the key in my pocket, but that doesn't do any good. The ghost doesn't need a key to go joyriding."

Cops have given Wingert 36 parking tickets since he bought the car six months ago.

"That damn ghost drives it around while I'm working and parks it anywhere he pleases — in fire lanes, handicapped spaces.

"One time he double-parked it in the street and the cops had it towed away," said the frustrated car owner.

AT his wit's end: Barry Wingert.

The mischievous spirit has gotten Wingert arrested for speeding, reckless driving and failure to stop at a stop sign.

"He just takes over while I'm driving. He presses down on the accelerator and away we go," Wingert added.

"He's caused me to run stop signs, race by a police cruiser at 85 m.p.h. and plow through traffic lights like they weren't there.

"I haven't had a whole lot of luck explaining to cops that it's not my fault."

The ghostly prankster changes channels on the radio, flips on the windshield wipers when it isn't raining, messes with the heater and air conditioning and lays on the horn whenever he feels like it.

"I pulled up to a stop sign behind a car driven by a 260-pound hulk.

"The ghost laid on the horn hot and heavy. Next thing I know, the hulk is busting my jaw."

Wingert finally got a gutfull of the the ghostly joker when he paid for a burger and fries at a fast food drive-in window in Jacksonville, Fla. The spirit was too restless to wait for the order — and drove away.

"I'll never drive that car again. I'm going to sell it, even if I have to take a loss," Wingert said. "That ghost will never give it up, no matter who owns it."

'The angels are calling me away,' said brave Texas bride!

COURAGEOUS Erika Valdez never complained about the terrible disease that ended up killing her.

By DICK DONOVAN / Staff writer

"Mama. Papa. Today I am going to die . . . the angels are calling me!"

A few hours later — just one day after she was married in a "dream wedding" — 15-year-old Erika Valdez kissed her parents and new husband goodbye, then closed her eyes and died!

CANCER CLAIMS TEEN — 1 DAY AFTER HER DREAM WEDDING!

After years of chemotherapy, radiation and a bone marrow transplant, the young Texas beauty, who never cried and never complained, had finally lost her courageous battle with leukemia.

But not before she realized one of her fondest dreams — to be married in a white wedding dress.

"She was a beautiful bride," her anguished father Israel Olivares told Weekly World News in an interview in his home in Dallas. "It was nice to see her so happy.

"Some people may have wondered how we could allow such a young girl to get married. But we knew she was going to die. How could we say no?

"About a week before she died, she told her mother, 'I don't want you to cry for me. I don't want anyone to cry for me. I don't like tears.' She was a very special little girl."

BEAUTIFUL Erika and her husband Joaquin Valdez.

Erika's leukemia was diagnosed when she was 12.

That put her into radiation and chemotherapy for the next 2½ years.

"She'd dress up for her hospital visits as if she were going to a party," recalled her mother, Dora. "She always wanted her clothes to match."

Then last December, Erika got some news that sent her spirits soaring. Tests indicated that her bone marrow was a perfect match for her 5-year-old sister Fabiola. At best, it only delayed the inevitable.

During what were to be her final weeks of life, a friend introduced her to 19-year-old high school senior Joaquin Valdez. Erika fell madly, hopelessly, head-over-heels in love with the handsome lad she saw as her knight in shining armor.

"She said, 'Mom, this boy has no reason to like me. I look like a monster,'" Dora said. "But the boy said he liked her for who she was, not how she looked."

And so it was that just a few short weeks ago, Erika and Joaquin became husband and wife.

At the reception, the happy couple danced, cut the wedding cake and posed for pictures. She threw her bouquet, both were showered with rice.

The next day, Erika heard the angels calling.

But it wasn't long before her bubble burst. It became painfully obvious that leukemia was still ravaging her

A little girl's coffin was suddenly set ablaze in a shimmering, golden glow that slowly faded to reveal an image of divine beauty — the face of Jesus Christ!

The holy visitation — termed one of the greatest miracles since the resurrection — came as the 5-year-old leukemia victim was being lowered to her grave in an old church cemetery near Winston-Salem, N.C.

"I don't know how I did it . . . I really don't remember taking the picture," 23-year-old Kathy Miller said in an interview from her home in Atlanta, Ga.

"I just know that when I saw that glorious face of Jesus, I felt an intense warm surge throughout my body. It was like my entire being was take His picture."

The dead girl's mother has asked that none of the family members be identified with their real names and that the location of their homes and the cemetery be kept confidential to avoid possible media exploitation.

"I know that Jesus came to the cemetery to be with one of his very special lambs," the mother said. "My little baby loved Jesus. She knew that a very special angel with Him in Heaven. I prayed for God to forgive me for lying to her. I think that's why He appeared at her grave . . . to let me know that what I had told her was true."

Kathy's husband Brian said age of Jesus that appears on the Shroud of Turin.

"I have no doubt now that the shroud really is the cloth that Jesus was wrapped in when he was taken down from the cross," Brian said. "But of course, the face at the grave was much clearer.

"The one thing that is burned into my heart is the love and compassion I saw in that beautiful face. I could see that He has suffered unimaginable pain, yet there was a serenity and love that has given me an inner joy I've never known before."

The priest who performed the graveside service said he has sent a full report and a copy of the photograph for presentation to Pope John Paul II.

"The Holy Father may want to make some proclamation with regard to the child," a Vatican spokesman told Weekly World News. "The graveside visitation of Christ is one of the greatest miracles since

The REAL difference between men and women!

Scientific research has revealed the surprising real difference between men and women: It's the way their brains work!

What sounds like ordinary noise to a man seems like earsplitting racket to a woman.

Women have more sensitive taste and are more sensitive to being touched. Men have better daylight vision and faster reaction time.

And these are just a few of the differences scientists have found in the way the brains of males and females work.

Researchers reveal that girls talk earlier, more fluently and more often than boys and have much better control over their hands and fingers.

In contrast, boys are all thumbs when it comes to using their hands but they're stronger, faster and more active than girls. And they are natural explorers who love to take things apart and discover how they work.

"Men and women do think differently — the evidence is conclusive. That's because of the difference in the organ of the body that is the programmer of all behavior — the brain," explained Dr. Richard Restak, a neurologist.

Dr. Diane McGuinness, a leading researcher in the field, stated in a recent report that "as human beings get older, the differences between the sexes increase."

Scientists have concluded that girls are born with somewhat better sensory perception. Their hearing is so much sharper that the din of a noisy factory seems twice as loud to women as to men.

Girls make more attentive listeners and respond more emotionally to what is said.

As for men, they have better vision in daylight and better

Gun-toting gal kidnaps man from gas station — for sex!

A would-be rape victim was abducted from a gas station and pistol-whipped during a terrifying six-hour ordeal — until the man talked his female captor into releasing him.

Would-be rape victim begs for mercy

"Please let me go. I'm late for work," Ronald Jackson pleaded with his gun-toting captor, Patricia Morris, 37.

Jackson's frightening day began about 8 a.m. when he stopped for a soft drink at a gas station in Pekin, Ill.

"You've got a cute ass," said Miss Morris, as she whipped out a .25 caliber pistol and forced him into his car. Jackson, 25, was told to drive to her apartment.

"She ordered him at gunpoint to remove his shirt, pants, shoes and socks," said Police Lt. Charles Bassett. "Then she massaged and kissed various parts of his body.

"She tried for hours to get him to perform various sex acts, but apparently she didn't turn him on. She wasn't much to look at. On a scale of 1 to 10, she was a minus."

The hapless victim fought off his tormentor's forceful advances for six grueling hours before he begged her to release him so he could go to work.

Miss Morris was arrested later and pleaded guilty to charges of kidnapping and theft. She had stolen the pistol from another man.

CREW SURVIVES 10 YEARS IN HOLD OF SUNKEN SHIP!

By JOHN XAVIER / Correspondent

The crew of a ship that sank 10 years ago miraculously survived in their underwater tomb until divers rescued them late last month, say authorities.

The mind-boggling discovery of the men in 40 feet of water off Africa's Ivory Coast came as a shock to authorities who thought all 14 hands perished when the cargo ship Fourie Truter went down on June 23, 1983.

As authorities pointed out, there was no way they could have known that an enormous air bubble formed in the hold, literally providing the crewmen with space to live and breathe. They also didn't take into account that the ship was carrying canned meats and bottled water when it sank.

"Their survival was a miracle, nothing more, nothing less," marine commission spokesman Lucian Parinet told reporters in Grand Bassam, Ivory Coast.

"From what we gather the men were pinned in the ship's hold by hull damage but managed to float a hose to the surface for additional air.

"That's not to say that their imprisonment wasn't hellish. Their radio gear malfunctioned and they had no contact with the outside world.

"Those pathetic men survived the cramped quarters in darkness with nothing to do but wait for someone to find them."

'They looked like corpses — and 2 of the men were insane!'

Eleven of the men required emergency treatment for medical conditions caused by poor diet.

Three others were not only clinically insane. Amadou Valee was one of the first rescuers to see the survivors.

He told reporters they looked "like living ghosts, pasty white and rail thin.

"We tried to talk to them but they didn't make sense," he continued.

"They spoke in word fragments and talked to each oth-

Hot tips for microwave cooking!

If you're one of those cooks who likes to convert recipes from conventional cooking to the microwave, here are a few guidelines to follow to boost your success rate:

- Cut cooking time from 25 to 33 percent. Microwave is quicker.
- There is less evaporation in a microwave, so cut liquid measures by 33 percent.
- Recipes that can be microwaved in a round casserole convert well because the food can be stirred occasionally during zapping.
- The larger the quantity of food, the longer it will take to microwave.
- Foods high in fat and sugar microwave faster.
- Always undercook. You can always correct if underdone. But nothing will save overcooked food.

And remember, foods microwave from the outside in, not from the inside out.

EX-PRESIDENT WORSHIPPED AS A GOD — by jungle tribe!

BIG-EARED Lyndon Johnson is considered a holy, wise and generous god by a savage New Guinea tribe.

By BENJAMIN GUNN / Correspondent

A Stone Age tribe of cave dwellers in the rugged and remote Bismarck Mountains of central Papua New Guinea worships a former U.S. President as a god-king, reports the stunned leader of a recent anthropological expedition to the area.

A fading and wrinkled color photograph of Lyndon B. Johnson hangs decorated with flowers in the mammoth, cathedral-like cave of the primitive tribe's high priest, said Dr. Ulrich Ritterfeldt of the University of Utrecht in Holland.

"It's absolutely mind-boggling," he said at a news conference. "Once or twice a week, the entire tribe actually stages a torchlight procession to the cavern and carries baskets of orchids and yam-like vegetables as offerings to their god-king."

"Through a combination of sign language and pidgin English, the high priest, Ken Ma, told us the tribe has been worshipping LBJ as its 'holy, wise and generous' deity for about 20 years," Dr. Ritterfeldt said.

"Who knows how or where the lowlander came by the picture? Perhaps from some American visitor."

The high priest told the anthropologist that an ancient tribal legend predicted that a pale-faced god with large, protruding ears and his long-eared hounds would descend from heaven — from nearby Mt. Wilhelm, which towers above the clouds at 14,793 feet — and shower blessings on the savages and help them form a great society.

"For generations," Dr. Ritterfeldt said, "it's been tradition that big ears are beautiful. Incredible as it may seem, starting when they're just toddlers, male members of the tribe wear wedges behind their ears so they will protrude grotesquely from their heads.

"In addition, they hang heavy weights from each ear to stretch the lobes. So, when the high priest saw the LBJ picture, he was agog with wonder.

"He was convinced the god-king was rewarding his faithful followers for their devotion. It's one of the most bizarre situations I've ever encountered."

HOW TO READ A FACE LIKE A BOOK!

Your facial features reveal your personality, says an expert in facial reading.

Dallas psychologist Alan Griffin agreed: "The face will reflect a person's reaction to life. Given a recurrent, prevalent feeling, the facial characteristics that portray that feeling can become more or less permanent."

And National Aeronautics and Space Administration policy analyst Dr. Michel Bader used face reading in dealing with personnel problems as deputy director of astronautics. "I also found face reading very useful in personal relationships," he said.

Over a five-year period, a research team studied more than 1,000 people and validated 68 personality factors that can be read from facial features, Tiegs said. They found that 92 percent of the time facial features accurately revealed specific personality traits.

● Eyes: The larger the iris (the colored portion), the more a person tends to show emotion. People with small irises keep their feelings hidden. The person with only a small part of his eyelid showing takes time to make up his mind, but the person with a lot of eyelid showing is more direct, wanting to deal with the obvious without a lot of deliberation.

● Eyebrows: A relatively flat eyebrow indicates a need for harmony and a sensitivity to feelings. People with inverted-V eyebrows appreciate structure, form and geometric proportion. Eyebrows high above the eye belong to discriminating people who can seem aloof, while eyebrows closer together to the eye reveal a person who is more approachable.

● Nose: The bulbous nose indicates a person with a feel for the timeliness of what's happening. If the bridge of the nose is scooped, he is spontaneously helpful, while a "Roman" or "hawk" nose indicates someone who is more commercial-minded and price-conscious.

If the tip of the nose sticks straight out or is downturned, it denotes a skeptic, while a plug nose shows an open-minded person.

● Lips: A thin upper lip indicates brevity in speech. A person with a thick bottom lip gives his time and service automatically, while a person

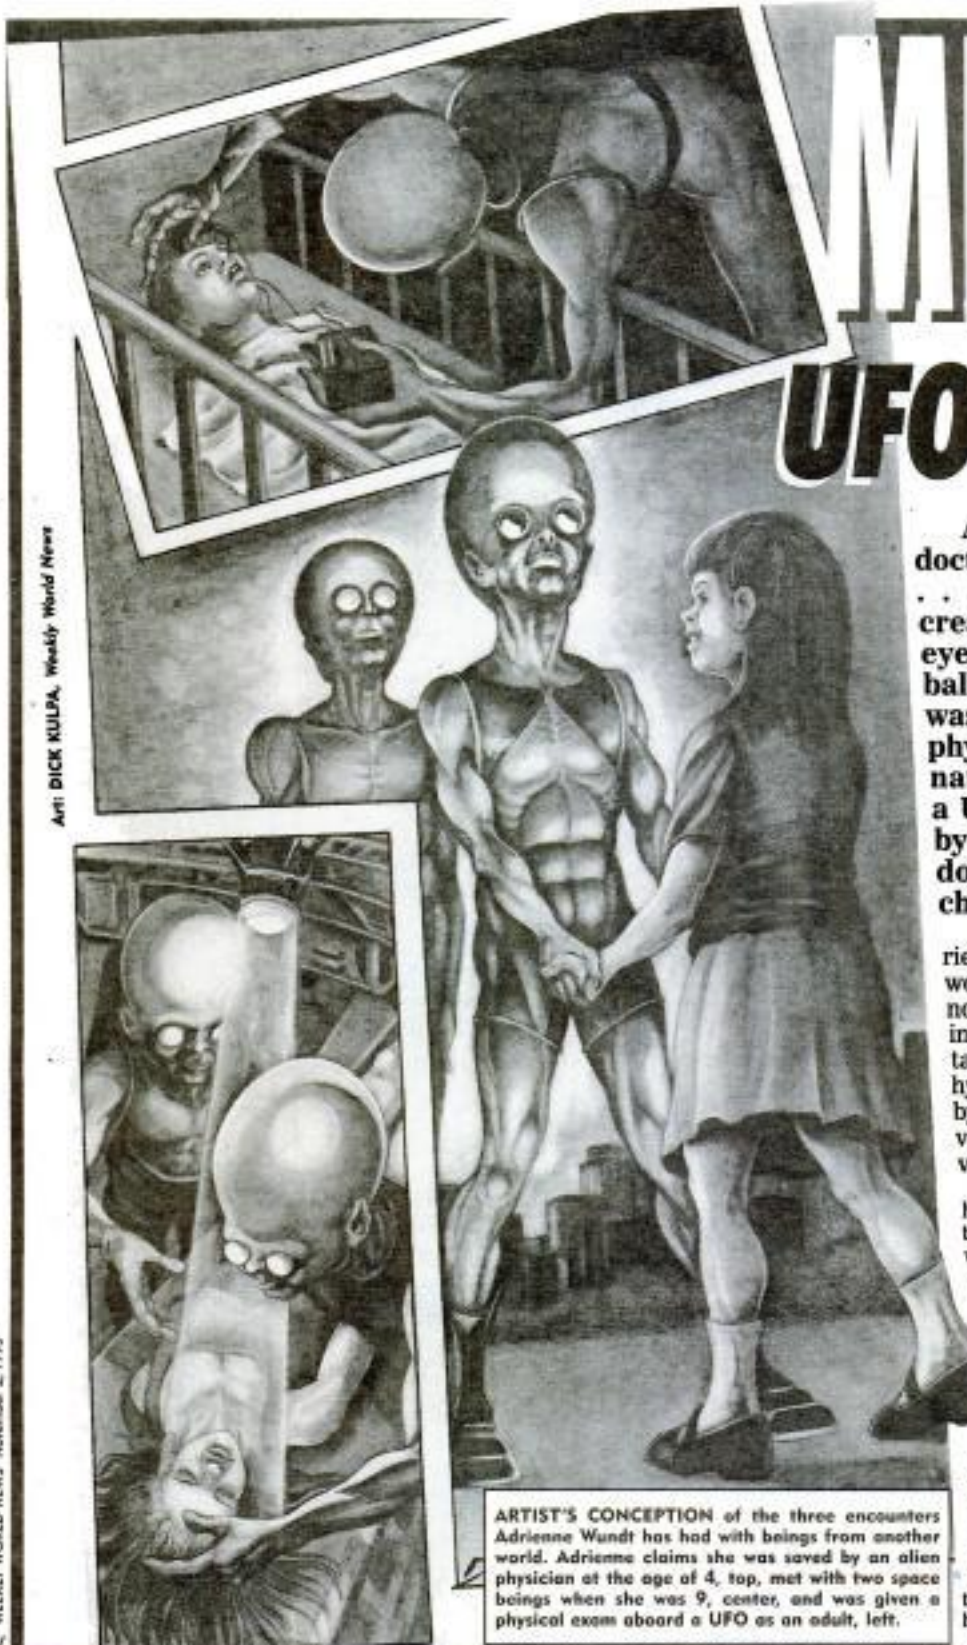
MIRACLE UFO DOCTOR



Art: DICK KULPA, Weekly World News

A miracle cure by a space alien doctor when she was 4 years old . . . a frightening encounter with creatures with eyes like golf balls when she was 9 . . . and a physical examination aboard a UFO when she was in her 30s — by the very same extraterrestrial doctor who had cured her as a child!

By LAUREL BOWIE

Special report

Detroit woman's close encounters baffle experts!

These are among the incredible memories of Detroit businesswoman Adrienne Wundt, now 45, who knew nothing about her eerie contacts until she was hypnotized recently by famed UFO investigator Dr. Stephen Divorky.

"She'd never suspected that her longtime interest in UFOs was in part motivated by the unconscious memory of several UFO experiences she'd had starting at the age of 4," Dr. Divorky said.

In Mrs. Wundt's earliest recollection of an alien encounter, she described a doctor who visited her while she was in a hospital as a child, a victim of hepatitis. She said the doctor came to her three times, late at night, "after the nurses went to sleep."

On each visit he gave Adrienne candy, rubbed her feet and back — and on the third visit he attached two black boxes to her with wires, one to her abdomen and one to her head. The very next day, the girl was discharged from the hospital — completely cured.

At another hypnotic session, Mrs. Wundt recalled two bizarre-looking creatures who met her at a lonely place near her Michigan home when she was 9 years old.

"They told her they were her friends and that they had saved her life years earlier," Dr. Divorky said. "The thing she remembered best was their eyes, which she described as being a dull white, without any visible pupil, about two inches in diameter and protruding like golf balls."

During a third hypnotic session, the woman recalled a vacation trip to South Carolina when she was in her mid-30s. She remembered being taken aboard a UFO and examined by the same doctor who had cured her when she was 4.

"He was the only person aboard who said anything

"He spoke English but had an accent. He acted as if he knew her. It was definitely the same person."

Three or four other creatures aboard the craft stood less than 5 feet tall, had large heads and frail bodies — and bug-eyes just like the aliens she had seen when she was 9.

"We have enough additional and similar cases that we know this is not an isolated case, nor is it the product of a hoax or delusion," Dr. Divorky said.

SNAKE HANDLERS NO MATCH FOR RILED RATTLERS!

Pittsburgh doctors scrambled to find an antivenin serum for two nutty snake handlers who got a little too close to some deadly rattlers.

Brian Graboski, 23, and Joseph Holomshek, 36, were engaged in a competition at the Sportsmen Club in West Newton, Pa., which entailed picking up diamondback rattlesnakes using a two-pronged stick.

Both victims declined medical treatment for the bites in their hands at first, but as the evening approached, they became nauseous, with arms swollen from fingers to shoulder.

So the unlucky snake charmers called an ambulance and took themselves in for some anti-snakebite treatment, said Sportsmen Club representative Christine Lagares.

"I just messed up," responded Graboski when he was asked what happened.
